Foreword

From the study of a brief outline of her mother's paternal ancestry, the compiler of these records became zealous to search further into ancestral data and check up on this purported descent from Roger Williams and from William and Mary Dyer of Newport.

After several years of effort, consulting sources in libraries and in Rhode Island probate offices, the data gathered are herewith arranged in compact form that future generations may know the names and something of the achievements of their forebears.

In each generation the names of the children as far as can be found and the ancestry of the wife of each of the Dyers is traced.

On account of the destruction by fire in 1869, the records of No. Kingston show many blank spaces, some of which can be filled from probate records.

Much of the authority for data on the first four generations of Dyers as well as that on other early families is found in "Austin's Genealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island". Arnold's printed records of Rhode Island towns, and the R. I. Historical Society Collections have also afforded much help.

A recent acquisition of the R. I. Historical Society Library is a manuscript copy of Dyer records by William Allan Dyer of Syracuse, N. Y. He has added considerable material on the early families, not formerly available.

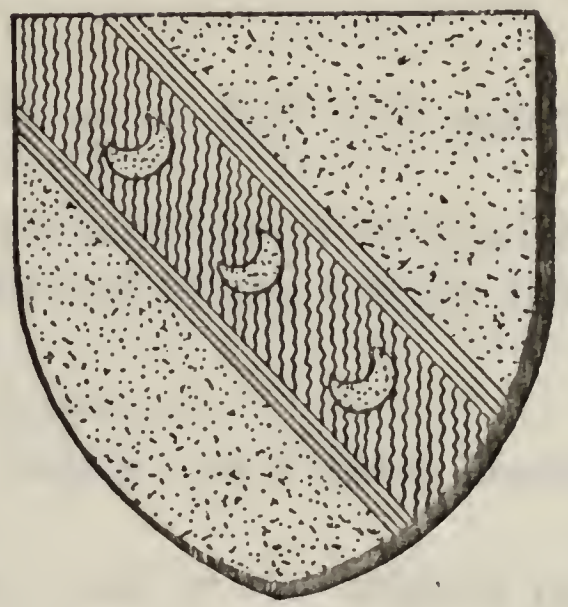
Dyer Coat of Arms



"On a bend cottised three crescents, impaling a fess dancetly between three mullets." With the crest "An Arm embowed holding a drawn sword".

The use of this coat of arms is recorded once in Portsmouth, R. I. in 1660 and again in Boston, Mass. in 1713. A third use is shown in the Mass. archives, Vol. 129, p. 163 being a power of attorney executed on Aug. 20, 1688 by Mary Dyer of Sussex in Penn. in favor of her son, William. Mary Dyer signed and sealed this document and used an armorial seal.

The identity of William Dyer has been established as Major William Dyer. He must have been son of William Dyer who died in 1687 and whose wife was Mary Walker. This son went to New York and then to Delaware and was surveyor of customs for all the American Provinces.

William and Mary Dyer

of Newport

William Dyer, son of William Dyer, church warden at Kirkby Laythrope, County Lincoln, England, was a milliner in the new exchange in London, that is, a dealer in small wares imported from Milan, Italy. He arrived in Boston with his wife, Mary, before December 1635. They joined the church of which Rev. John Wilson was pastor. Their second child, Samuel, was baptised here Dec. 20, 1635.

While in Boston, in Jan. 1636, Wm. Dyer was chosen clerk of a commission for the fortification of Fort Hill.

On account of the controversy over the Antinomian movement versus the established church in Boston, about fifty of the followers of Mr. Wheelwright and Mrs. Hutchinson, the leaders, were disfranchised and disarmed. Many of these people fled to Rhode Island. William Dyer's family and the Hutchinson family were among them.

Roger Williams had been banished from Mass. Bay Colony a year earlier and had gone into Rhode Island. A group from Boston went ahead to confer with him about joining his new colony. He suggested to them that the Island of Acquidneck, later Portsmouth, was desirable for a settlement. He secured for them a title to it from the Indians. The deed of purchase for this land was made March 24, 1636/7 to William Coddington, John Clarke and others. On March 7, 1637/8, William Dyer was one of the nineteen persons who signed the compact for the settlement of Portsmouth. He was chosen clerk.

A disagreement among these members was followed by the settlement of some of the Portsmouth families into the new town of Newport. William Dyer was chosen clerk when the agreement for the settlement of Newport was drawn up.

He was made General Recorder of the Colony in 1647 when the government of "Providence Plantations in Narragansett Bay" was set up under the first charter. Wm. Dyer was a very active member of the Colony. There are many references to him in Colonial Records of R. I. On Jan. 5, 1639, he and three others were to proportion the land. Mar. 10, 1640, he had 87 acres of land recorded to him at Newport. He was secretary for the towns of Portsmouth and Newport in 1640 and for six consecutive years thereafter. He was Attorney General in 1650 and three years following. In 1653, he received a commission from the Assembly to act against the Dutch by sea. He was named Captain and Commander-in-chief on the sea. Captain John Underhill was Commander-in-chief upon the land. In 1661 William Dyer was chosen surveyor of Misquamicut.

In 1652-3 he went to England with John Clarke and Roger Williams to obtain a revocation of Gov. Coddington's power. Mrs. Mary Dyer preceded, by a year, her husband on this trip to England. He returned leaving her in England, where she stayed five years. During this time she had embraced the doctrines of the Quaker faith and became a minister of that faith. For this reason, she was imprisoned on reaching Boston. She was released on her promise to return to her home in Newport and speak not to anyone on the route. Two years later she returned to Boston to preach her doctrines under remonstrance of her family. She was tried and condemned to death with Marmaduke Stephenson and William Robinson. Again she was reprieved but finally hung on June 1, 1660 in Boston not far from the Common. Her formed pastor, Rev. John Wilson, urged her to repent and not let the "Deceit of the Devil" influence her.

Suffolk, Katherine Hamby, dau. of Robert and Elizabeth Hamby. This couple returned to New England and went to join the rest of the Hutchinson family in Rhode Island. He was one of the signers of the compact at Portsmouth, Mar. 7, 1638. He was on the roll of freemen at Newport in 1641. However he must have had interests in Boston also as all of the children were baptized there. There were seven children, of whom Ann, the fourth, who was bapt. Nov. 19, 1643, m. Samuel Dyer.

Edward Hutchinson's 1st wife, Katherine d. ab. 1649-50 and he m. (2) Abigail, wid. of Robert Button. The 2nd wife had four more children. Edward Hutchinson was Lieut. in 1654 and Capt. in 1657 in Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co. He served also in King Philip's war with the forces from Massachusetts. He was chief officer of cavalry and was mortally wounded in an Indian Ambuscade at West Brookfield, Mass. He died as a result of this at Marlboro, August 19, 1675.

Mrs. Hutchinson, the mother of Edward cited above, was bapt. in the parish church of St. Wilfred Alford July 20, 1591. She has been the subject of many historical sketches. Being the daughter of a clergyman, who moved from Alford to London when she was fourteen yrs. old, she had the opportunity to acquire considerable culture. This, added to her naturally forceful character inherited doubtless from her remarkably long line of noted ancestors, made her the most noted woman of her time in the New England Colonies. She apparently feared no one and even showed her disapproval of the preaching of the Rev. John Wilson by walking out of church during his sermon. She voiced many theological heresies and gave lectures in Boston, which attracted many hearers from the regular church. Her followers were called Antinomians. They believed that the person of the Holy Ghost dwells within a justified person. After Winthrop was elected Gov. of Mass. Bay Colony, Mrs. Hutchinson and her followers were evicted from the Colony. Some went to New Hampshire. She and her family bought the island of Aquidneck, R. I. and lived there until her husband died in 1642. After this, she removed with her younger children to a Dutch settlement near New York, where she met her death by the hands of Indians.

In 1911 a bronze tablet to the memory of Mrs. Hutchinson was placed on Split Rock, which is near the site of her home, now in Pelham Bay Park, within the limits of New York City. The tablet erected by the Society of Colonial Dames of the State of New York reads as follows:

Anne Hutchinson
Banished from Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1638
Because of her Devotion to Religious Liberty
This Courageous Woman
Sought Freedom from Persecution
in New Netherland
Near this Rock in 1643, She and her Household were massacred by Indians

THE DESCENT OF THE MARBURY FAMILY

The descent of the Marbury family from the Royal families of Europe has been conclusively proved by research.

The great-grandfather of Rev. Francis Marbury was John Marbury, who married Anne Blout. Her great-grandfather was Sir Walter Blout (1348-1403), who married Donna Sancha de Ayala, dau. of Don Diego Gomez de Toledo and Donna Inez de Ayala. Thus an interesting Spanish ancestry is indicated.

Bridget Dryden, wife of Rev. Francis Marbury, had even a more interesting array of ancestors than her husband. Her parents were John Dryden and wife Elizabeth Cope. The Cope ancestry traces through many heraldic lines to the following: Sir Thomas Raleigh, Sir John Spencer, Sir Edward Raleigh, Sir Ralph Verney, Sir Richard Chamberlayne, Sir John Knevit, and Ralph, Earl of Stafford. The wife of Ralph, Earl of Stafford, Lady Margaret de Audley, was grdau. of Gilbert, Earl of Claire, whose wife Princess Joan de Arce was the dau. of Edward I of England and his wife, Eleanor, dau. of Ferdinand III, King of Castile and Leon. Thereby is established a Spanish ancestry, which includes "Le Cid", national hero of Spain. The ancestry of Edward I includes all the English Kings to his time, from William, the Conqueror, whose wife, Matilda of Flanders, was a descendant of Charlemagne. Add to the above ancestors also: Alfred the Great, Malcolm III, and Duncan of Scotland, Geoffrey Plantagenet, Count of Anjou, and several of the French Kings.

Of the twenty-five Barons, who on June 15, 1215 met in the meadow of Runnemede and demanded of their King, John, that he sign that famous document known as "Magna Charta", seventeen left descendants. Ten of these were ancestors of Mrs. Anne Hutchinson. The historic site has been bought and presented to the British people by an American-born woman, who by marriage, became Lady Fairhaven of London.

The success of the Barons in obtaining this Charta changed the outlook for the oppressed people of that day. The articles of constitutional liberty embodied therein are a priceless heritage to their descendants. The ten Barons from whom Mrs. Hutchinson's descent can be traced are as follows:

1. Roger Bigod, second Earl of Norfolk, d. 1220.
2. Hugh Bigod, third Earl of Norfolk, d. 1225.
3. Henry de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, d. 1220.
4. Richard de Clare, Earl of Hertford, d. 1218.
5. Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester & Hertford, d. 1230.
6. John de Lacie, Earl of Lincoln, d. 1240.
7. William de Huntingfield, a feudal baron in Suffolk, d. 1256.
8. William Malet, baron of Curry-Malet, in Somersetshire, d. 1224.
9. Saire de Quincy, Earl of Winchester, d. 1219.
10. Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, d. 1221.

ANCESTRY OF MARY GREENE, WIFE OF EDWARD DYER

MARY GREENE'S father was WILLIAM GREENE, b. Dec. 6, 1652. He died in 1679 at the early age of twenty-six years. He died in Newport as he was too ill on his return from a tropical voyage to be taken to his home in Warwick. His wife, m. Dec. 17, 1674, was MARY SAYLES, b. July 11, 1652; d. 1713, the dau. of JOHN SAYLES, b. ab. 1630 and his wife, MARY WILLIAMS, b. Aug. 1633 at Plymouth, where her father, ROGER WILLIAMS, was assistant pastor at the church. JOHN SAYLES was the son of JOHN SAYLES who was in Charlestown, Mass. in 1630. His name is on records in Providence in 1645. He had children: Phoebe, John and Richard. (Ref. American Genealogist Vol. XV, No. 4, p. 228.)

WILLIAM GREENE above was the third child of JOHN GREENE, bapt. at St. Thomas Church, Salisbury, County Wilts, England on Aug. 15, 1620. He d. Nov. 27, 1708. He m. ab. 1648 ANNE ALMY, b. in England ab. 1627; dau. of WM. and AUDREY (BARLOW) ALMY of Portsmouth, R. I. She d. May 17, 1709. William Almy, b. 1601, came to America first in the ship with Winthrop. He returned to England to get his family and all came to America in the ship "Abigail". He had then a dau. Ann and a son Christopher. He lived first at Lynn, then at Sandwich before settling at Portsmouth, R. I., where he had a grant of land in 1644.

John Greene was known as Major John Greene. He inherited the estate of his father, called "Greenes' Hold" in that part of Warwick called Shawomet, which had been purchased from the Indian chief, Miantonomi. Major John Greene, for nearly fifty years filled the highest public offices. He was a member of the Colonial Assembly and Deputy Governor under both charters. He visited England during the administration of Andros and presented a petition to the King. He was Captain of Militia for eight years and "Major for the Main" for seven years. From 1683-86 and 1690-91, he commanded all the trained bands on the mainland in R. I. He was Deputy Governor for eleven years, continuously 1690-1700, when, at the age of eighty years, he retired from public life.

Father of the above was JOHN GREENE, b. ab. 1590 at the estate of his parents, RICHARD and MARY HOOKER GREENE, at Bowbridge Hill, parish of Gillinghan, Dorset, England. His father, Richard, gr.father, RICHARD, and gt.grandfather, ROBERT, had for nearly a century resided at this estate. John Greene with his wife and six children embarked from Hampton, Eng. Apr. 6, 1635 in the ship "James" and arrived at Boston June 3, 1635. He went first to Salem, where he met Roger Williams. He was one of eleven men bapt. by Williams and one of the twelve original members of the First Baptist Church organized on the continent at Providence. He was driven from Mass. for his religious convictions. He came to Providence in 1637 and later settled at Warwick. His wife (m. Nov. 4, 1619 at St. Thomas Church, Salisbury, County Wilts, Eng.), mother of his seven children, was JOANNE TATTERSHALL. She d. soon after coming to R. I. He m. (2) a widow, Alice Daniels, who lived only a short time. On a trip to London, he took a third wife named Phillippa. She came back with him to R. I. and lived in Warwick nearly thirty years after the death of her husband in Jan. 1659. He was known as Surgeon, John Greene.

ROGER WILLIAMS

A very accurate account of the life and works of Roger Williams was prepared by the late Dr. Howard M. Chapin, librarian of the R. I. Historical Society, and printed serially in the Providence Evening Bulletin in 1936 during the celebration of the R. I. Tercentenary. This account, based on documentary evidence to which Dr. Chapin had access at the John Carter Brown Library as well as the Hist. Soc. library is presented in a scholarly manner. A few of the principal facts concerning the life of this distinguished man as given in these articles are here noted.

The exact dates of the birth and death of Roger Williams are not known. His parents lived in London and his birth date is about 1605. His father, James Williams, was a merchant tailor and a member of the Merchant Tailors Guild. He was also designated a "Citizen of London", which signified that he ranked above the ordinary tradesman and nearer the gentry. His wife was Alice Pemberton, dau. of Robert Pemberton, of a family of the landed gentry, proud of its ancestry, being entitled to bear heraldic arms. Roger Pemberton, brother of Alice, was godfather to Roger Williams. The Pembertons were related to the Stokes family of the town of St. Albans in Hertfordshire.

Roger Williams had two brothers, Sydrack and Robert and a sister Catherine. The family lived in a suburb of London, known as West Smithfield. Their street, then called Cow Lane, is now called King Street.

The Williams family attended the church of St. Sepulchre. The records of this church were destroyed in the great London fire and, for this reason, the baptismal record for Roger Williams cannot be found. Capt. John Smith, who was president of the Colony at Jamestown, Va. in 1608 and made return visits to England, attended this same church. Doubtless Roger Williams heard about the new world across the water from him.

Charterhouse School was not far from the Williams home and here Roger pursued his studies so diligently that he was given a fellowship, which helped him to go to Pembroke College at Cambridge. Here he received the degree of B.A. in 1626. He continued graduate work for two years longer. At Cambridge the religious atmosphere leaned more to the liberal than at Oxford. This influence, no doubt, had an effect in shaping the democratic ideals, which later cropped out in the teachings of Roger Williams. Ordained a minister of the Church of England, he was appointed private chaplin to Sir William Masham, who lived at Otes in Essex. In this position, he became acquainted with many young men, who later had much influence in England. He fell in love with a relative of Lady Masham but his suit was scorned and he soon married a sympathetic lady's maid of the household, named Mary Barnard. They were married Dec. 15, 1629 at the church at High Laver at Essex. Foreseeing persecutions on account of his religious views, which differed greatly from those of the English Churh, Roger Williams and his bride decided to go to Bristol to embark for America. At Bristol they met John Winthrop and they talked about the settlements in America. Williams and his wife set sail on the ship "Lyon" Dec. 1, 1630. It took them two months of rough wintry weather to make the crossing.

In Boston, Williams declined the offer of a teaching position in the church there as his views were very different from those of the ministers in the established church. He acted for a time as assistant in the Salem church and then went to Plymouth, which was a separatist community. Here he became interested in the Indians and preached to them as a missionary. He learned their language and made friends with their chiefs. On the death of the pastor in Salem, he was recalled there.

He expounded his own views so freely there that he was banished from the Colony.

He left Salem hurriedly in 1636 on receiving a warning from his loyal friend, Winthrop, that the Boston authorities were planning to place him forcibly on board ship for a return to England. Governor Winthrop suggested to him that the Narragansett Bay District was desirable for a settlement and was a place beyond the jurisdiction of Mass. Bay Colony, where he was considered a heretic. Accordingly in Jan. 1636 with four of his followers, William Harris, John Smith, Francis Weeks, and Thomas Angell, he set out from Salem and travelled thru the wilderness towards the Narragansett country. They spent the winter among Indians to the east of the present city of Providence. The first settlement of this group was made on the shore of the Ten Mile river, where there was a spring of water, the spot being near what is now Phillipsdale. Roger Williams named the spot Providence, as he said that it was by God's merciful providence that he had been guided to it.

As spring advanced, others, Joshua Verin, William Arnold with his son, Benedict, William Carpenter and Thomas Hopkins, seem to have joined the little company. Soon, however, information came to them that their settlement was still within the confines of Plymouth Colony and they were requested to move on. Thomas Angell accompanied Williams in a canoe trip down the Seekonk river, looking for a new location. At Slate Rock some friendly Indians greeted them and guided them to a suitable spot farther down the river and around a point. The final settlement was made on what is now North Main Street, Providence, where the spring has been marked and enclosed with a railing.

After Roger Williams had conferred with Canonicus, uncle of Miantonomi, and had been assured by these Indian chiefs that the white settlers were welcome and that they could occupy a certain large tract of land between the Seekonk and the Pawtuxet Rivers, the others moved down from their earlier settlement and called their new home New Providence. Roger Williams mortgaged his home in Salem and bought presents which were accepted by the Indians as payment for their land.

The new settlement grew rapidly during its early years. Here persons holding unorthodox religious views were welcome as one of the first established rules in the new colony was that of religious toleration. There was no official church or State Church and all church organizations were to be self-supporting. The head of each family was an enfranchised citizen and all such met fortnightly and established thus an orderly government. In 1638 there were twelve who had the franchise privilege. They formed a Proprietors Company and such had authority to admit new members. There is a property tax list of 1650 which shows the number of houses in Providence at that time. In a plat of the home lots in Providence in 1664, among the fifty-two names of home owners are many surnames which have persisted to this day. Many of these are names of streets. A few are noted as follows: Dexter, Manton, Greene, Arnold, Wickes, Smith, Williams, Harris, Daniels, Sweet, Carpenter, Olney, Angell, Weston, Waterman, Westcott, Reynolds, Abbott, Brown, Warner, Field, Goodwin, Mann, Wickenden, Tiler, Hopkins, Lippitt, and West.

The name of Rhode Island was not officially given to this region until 1644. Roger Williams used the name as early as 1637. Verrazzano, an explorer, in a letter written in 1524, likened this island to the island of Rhodes in the Mediterranean.

In 1643, Roger Williams went to England to obtain a Colonial Charter for the Settlements on Narragansett Bay. He embarked on a Dutch ship from New Amsterdam as the authorities in Mass. would not let him pass thru that colony.

He returned with the Charter in 1644. This Charter applied to the section in which Providence, Portsmouth, Newport, Shawomet and Pawtuxet were located, also to an unsettled portion where the Narragansett Indians lived. The Charter established the legal existence of the Colony. It referred to the Colony as "The Colony of Providence Plantations". Later in 1663, a new charter included Aquidneck, the name of the united towns of Portsmouth and Newport, which were on the Isle of Rhodes. It applied to the "Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations". This Charter granted by King Charles II on July 8, 1663 remained in force until May 1843, when the State Constitution, which had been adopted in convention at East Greenwich Nov. 5, 1842, became operative, the only change in name being a substitution of the word State in place of Colony.

Roger Williams was active not only in Providence but throughout the colony. He organized the first Baptist Church in America on March 16, 1639. The same society has continued to this day, holding services in its stately colonial edifice at the corner of North Main and Waterman Streets in Providence. He also organized the Six Principle Baptist Church at North Kingston about 1660. At the suggestion of his Indian friends, he established a trading post near Wickford in 1644.

There are eleven publications to the credit of Roger Williams. The first of these was printed in London in 1643. It was: "A Key into the Language of America", a grammar and vocabulary of the Indian Tongue. Others to follow were: A Series of letters and replies to John Cotton, a religious teacher of Boston, who had attacked his religious beliefs.

"Queries of Highest Consideration".

"Bloody Tenet of Persecution". This was 247 pages more on the controversy with Cotton.

"Experiments in Spiritual Life and Health".

"Christenings make not Christians".

"The Hireling Ministry none of Christ's".

ANCESTRY OF BATHSHEBA DUNN, WIFE OF JOHN DYER (5)

BATHSHEBA DUNN was the daughter of SAMUEL DUNN and his wife, ANN CLARKE who were married in Newport, Sept. 2, 1718.

SAMUEL DUNN was the son of RICHARD DUNN, Jr. and his wife HANNAH. Richard Dunn, Jr. was a freeman of Newport and held the title of Captain in 1690.

Above was the son of RICHARD DUNN, a freeman in Newport in 1655 and a Deputy from Newport in 1681 and for several consecutive years. His name is on the tax list of 1680. This RICHARD DUNN m. ab. 1668 MARY BOWDITCH, dau. of NATHANIEL of Newport. He died in 1690. At least three sons survived the father. They were: Richard who m. Hannah, she d. Dec. 28, 1734; Samuel who m. Sarah Bailey; and Nathaniel who m. Elizabeth Lawton. The last named son went to Block Island ab. 1715 and lived there the rest of his life. Some members of this Dunn family were Captains of Privateers in Colonial and Revolutionary times and were quite noted.

There is not positive proof of Bathsheba Dunn's ancestry as neither her name nor that of her sister, Hannah is recorded among the children of Samuel and Ann Clarke Dunn. However, the will of Carew Clarke, father of Ann Clarke, mentions his grandson, Carew Dunn and granddaughters Hannah and Barbara Dunn. Doubtless the last name was misspelled. Carew Clarke's farm was near the Dyer farm. The fact that Bathsheba's grandson was named Samuel Dunn Dyer helps to sustain this presumed relationship.

Clarke ancestry.

ANN CLARKE, wife of SAMUEL DUNN was b. Sept. 8, 1698, dau. of CAREW CLARKE, son of JOSEPH, and wife ANN DYER, dau. of SAMUEL and ANN HUTCHINSON DYER, as already listed with their children on a previous page. JOSEPH CLARKE, b. Dec. 9, 1618 came from Bedfordshire, Eng. and was in Newport in 1638. He was one of the original members of the first Baptist church in 1644. He d. June 1, 1694. His first wife died and he m. (2) Margaret. He had brothers: Carew, b. 1602; Thomas, b. 1605; and Dr. John Clarke, b. 1609. They were sons of THOMAS and ROSE KERIDGE CLARKE. The late Thomas W. Bicknell, an Rhode Island historian says, "The honor of founding a free church in a free state does not belong to Roger Williams and the little group at Providence and Pawtuxet, but does belong, and is now accorded by most scholarly men, to Dr. John Clarke and his associates of Aquidneck, now Rhode Island."

The Boston Compact, penned by Dr. John Clarke on Mar. 7, 1638 declared: "We do hereby incorporate ourselves into a Bodie Politick—and will submit our persons, lives and estates—to all those perfect and most absolute laws of his given in his holy name of truth, to be guided and judged thereby."

The above compact was signed by twenty three persons, among them are the familiar names of the founders of Rhode Island.

Dr. Clarke's followers came from Boston, many by boat, and on the thirteenth day of May 1638, founded the town of Pocassett, now Portsmouth, on Aquidneck. The deeds to the same having been signed in March of that year by Canonicus and Miantinomi. The town was founded on the principles and the practice of "A civil state with perfect freedom in religious concernments."

Newport, a town with like principles, was founded in 1639. In 1640, the two towns with nearly one thousand inhabitants, united to form the Colony of Rhode Island. A Governor and officers, chosen by the people, then functioned as an English Colony, being the first civil state with religious liberty as its guiding principle, in the whole world.

Note: The fact that one of the children of Thomas and Martha Eldred was named Weeden Eldred (b. July 27, 1745) might seem to indicate that it was this same Thomas Eldred who m. Phoebe Weeden in Jamestown on Nov. 20, 1740 and also the possibility that the date of his first marriage may have been an error in copying. However, this is disproved, by a study of land records in No. Kingston which show that on Mar. 7, 1746, Thomas and Waite Eldred sold land in Exeter to Edward Greene. The graves of Thomas and Waite Eldred, originally in the area taken over for the Quonset Naval Base have been moved recently to the Quidnesset Cemetery near Davisville, R. I. Here also are the graves of the Dyer families moved from the Dyer farm in the same area.

JUDITH CLARKE, wife of ROBERT POTTER, JR. and mother of Martha Potter Eldred, b. Aug. 8, 1712 was dau. of WILLIAM CLARKE, b. May 27, 1673; d. Feb. 28, 1767; m. Apr. 5, 1700 HANNAH KNIGHT. The four Clarke brothers, who were sons of Thomas and Rose Keridge Clarke, came from East Farleigh, Kent, Eng. This the same family noted on a previous page in the Ann Clarke Dunn ancestry.

KNIGHT Ancestry is as follows:

ANCESTRY OF SALLY RUSSELL AUSTIN ELDRED, WIFE OF SAMUEL FRANKLIN DYER (8)

SALLY RUSSELL AUSTIN, b. Dec. 16, 1821; d. Apr. 14, 1903 was the ninth child of SAMUEL and MARY MITCHELL AUSTIN of No. Kingston, R. I. Samuel Austin, b. 1779; d. Apr. 30, 1862 in the 83rd yr. of his age. He m. 1800 Mary Mitchell, b. Dec. 9, 1780; d. Oct. 16, 1874, ae. 93 yrs. 10 mo. 7d. She was dau. of SAMUEL MITCHELL and his wife MARGARET GARDNER who were married ab. 1774-5. Samuel Mitchell was a soldier of the Revolutionary War, serving under Capt. Samuel Thomas of No. Kingston.

Samuel Austin above owned property in No. Kingston near the well known landmark, called "Devil's Foot", on the Post Road between Wickford and East Greenwich. The northern corner of his land, he deeded to the Quidnesset Church Society and its first church was dedicated there on Aug. 11, 1842. A newer church occupies the site today (1941). Ref. Narragansett Hist. Reg. Vol. 11, pp. 112, 115 & 242. Samuel and Mary Austin had a family of eleven children all of whom reached maturity and all married except one daughter, Julia.

SAMUEL AUSTIN was the son of JAMES AUSTIN, b. 1743; d. June 21, 1826 in his 84th yr., and his wife, CATHERINE HUNT who were married Mar. 4, 1759 in No. Kingston.

James Austin's father probably was also a JAMES AUSTIN. It is known from land deeds that his mother's name was MARY. JOSEPH AUSTIN of So. Kingston bought land in No. Kingston ab. 1700 and was undoubtedly his grandfather. They were descendants of ROBERT AUSTIN who was of No. Kingston as early as 1661. He had sons: Jeremiah, Edmund, John, and Joseph. Some of this family are recorded in Charlestown, Richmond, and Exeter, R. I.

The ancestry of CATHERINE HUNT is also very difficult to establish. She was b. Nov. 16, 1739 (gravestone). Her grandparents were SAMUEL and ELIZABETH HUNT, both of whom died in the fall of 1759 (she signed statement). SAMUEL HUNT was a descendant of BARTHOLOMEW and ANN HUNT, early of Newport. Consult Austin's Gen. Dict. of R. I. He was probably a brother or a nephew of Ezekiel Hunt of E. Greenwich, who with wife, Sarah sold land in E. Greenwich in 1696 to William Davis and wife of Newport.

Although no positive proof is available as to the ancestry of Margaret, wife of Samuel Mitchell, noted above, it seems probable that she was the daughter of Isaac and Margaret Gardner of Exeter, R. I. This Isaac Gardner d. 1762, for in June of that year his 2nd wife (Tabatha Avery) of Coventry, R. I. m. 1760, requested an appraisal of his estate. No will or record of distribution of same is recorded. His first wife's surname was also Gardner. The book "The Gardners of Narragansett" calls her in one place the dau. of John (3), and George (2), George (1). See page 16 and note 46. In another place she is called dau. of William (3), Henry (2), George (1). There are in the records of Exeter listed six children to Isaac and Margaret Gardner but none named Margaret. However it is known that Sally Russell Austin had cousins named Gardner and some of other names who can be traced back to this couple. In her scrap book are several obituary notices marked "My cousin".

Samuel Mitchell may have been the son, b. Nov. 17, 1747, of Joseph and Naomi Dickens Mitchell of New Shoreham (Block Island), R. I.
